A long time ago, when planes were not very big or strong yet, all passengers had to be weighed with their luggage, so that planes did not have to carry more than it was safe to carry. Then later, when planes became bigger and stronger, only the luggage had to be weighed; and now very often, the luggage has to be measured because size is more important to the airlines than weight. Planes are so big and strong now, that they can carry almost any weight.

But before a passenger can travel by Hawaiian Airlines, he or she still has to be weighed. Once when one fat man was asked by the airline's clerk how much he weighed, he thought for a few seconds and said to her:

'With or Without my clothes?'

'Well sir,' the girl was surprised and answered, 'how are you planning to travel?'
